

FILE ONLY

The Washington Post
The New York Times
The Washington Times
The Wall Street Journal
The Christian Science Monitor
New York Daily News
USA Today
The Chicago Tribune
THE PRINCETON SENTINEL
Date 19 JAN 88 p.7

These Princetonians have a head start on success

William E. Colby, '40
Director, CIA (73-76)

John Irwin, II, '37
Lawyer, Patterson, Becknap, Webb et al

Donald Oberdorfer, Jr., '52
Correspondent, Washington Post

Alan W. Lukens, '46
Ambassador To Congo (84-87)

Each of these Princetonians started out as Army officers. Right out of college, either on active duty or in the reserve forces, they were given the kind of responsibility most people work years to obtain.

Army ROTC offers Princeton students the opportunity to graduate as officers and serve in the active Army, Army National Guard, or Army Reserve. Princeton ROTC goes back to 1919 and in keeping with the school's motto "Princeton in the Nation's Service," has trained over 3500 of the finest young men and women to take their places in the Army, business, politics, and the arts.

Princeton ROTC graduates are thinkers, leaders, and decision-makers. Army leadership training is the perfect complement to a Princeton degree. Alumni report it prepares them for challenges in all walks of life. As an added incentive three and two year scholarships are available worth over $15,000 each year.

If you want to prepare for a promising future, begin your future as an Army officer with Army ROTC. You too may wind up being recognized.

For information see Major Jaehne (452-4225), or visit the armory.

ARMY RESERVE OFFICERS' TRAINING CORPS
A Princeton Tradition

